Click Here

Lumpkin county inmate report

Lumpkin county inmate. Lumpkin county inmate search. Lumpkin jail inmates.

Looking for information on an inmate in Lumpkin County, GA? Start by searching the jail roster online. The results may include arrest records, mugshots, charges, bookings, and more. You can also visit the Lumpkin County Sheriff's Office website to find out how to locate a prisoner who is being held at the county detention center. This information includes: - Arrest location - Incarceration date - Scheduled release - Bail amount - Warrants - Related incidents Additionally, you can find information on the detention center itself, including its address and phone number. If you're unable to find an inmate's record online, it may be due to a lack of public access or outdated records. However, there are ways to locate old inmate records from years ago or have your own jail record sealed. Lumpkin County Detention Center Inmate Information and Mugshot Request The Lumpkin County Detention Center makes information about inmates available to the public, but if you cannot find a mugshot online, it may be because the facility has recently changed its policy regarding publicly posting them. You can request an inmate's mugshot by writing or visiting the jail at: Lumpkin County Detention Center 385 E. Main Street Dahlonega, GA 30533 Attention: Media Relations - Inmate Mugshot Request Alternatively, you can mail your request to the above address and include your email address for a digital copy. If you need assistance or want to find out information about an inmate who was arrested in Lumpkin County or Dahlonega, you can use the following options: 1. Search the official jail roster 2. Look up the inmate on vinelink.com 3. Call the facility at 706-864-0412 (available 24/7) 4. Write or visit the jail to request information Online searches using an individual's name, location, and crime can also provide results. Jail booking records typically include: * Full name of the inmate * Physical characteristics (age, sex, height, weight, etc.) * Mugshot(s) * Booking number, Inmate ID#, Jacket #, etc. * Booking date and time * Charges or offense details – applicable statute * Bond or bail amount, if applicable * Court date, court name, and location * Previous arrests in this jurisdiction However, not all information is included. Basic details such as name, arrest date, and charge are typically the only available. Online records are usually updated at least once per day. In some cases, updates occur every 15 minutes or even more frequently depending on the facility's policies. If you're trying to find an inmate in the Lumpkin County Detention Center, follow these steps: 1. Search the official jail roster 2. Look up the inmate on vinelink.com 3. Call the facility at 706-864-0412 (available 24/7) 4. Write or visit the jail to request information You can also search online using an individual's name, location, and crime. You can find information about inmates in various facilities by following these steps: 1. Check the official jail roster or Vinelink.com for updates. 2. Contact local police departments or call the Lumpkin County Detention Center at 706-864-0412. 3. Reach out to neighboring counties' jails and search their rosters. Alternatively, you can try writing or visiting the jail to request information. To find a prisoner in the Georgia State Prison system, use the State Prison Locator or Vinelink.com. For federal prisoners, visit the US Bureau of Prisons website and use their inmate locator. When searching for an immigration detainee, use the ICE online detainee locator with accurate name and A-number information. Looking for someone who is incarcerated in Lumpkin County, and if you can't find them online, here's what you need to do. You can search for information about an inmate on the jail's website, which may not be available every time. You can also call the Sheriff's Department at 706-864-0412 to get information on a particular inmate. You can check the Lumpkin County Detention Center's roster or visit them in person. You can search online for information about an inmate using various websites and online services, which may cost some money. Some of these websites offer free listings that can help you find the person. If you are unable to find an inmate on any other site, then visiting or contacting the Lumpkin County Detention Center directly at 706-864-0412 would be a good idea. You need to call the sheriff's office to get information about someone who is incarcerated. Even though most inmates are held in the county where they were arrested or convicted, they can be transferred to any US jail or prison if needed. This usually happens when a jurisdiction is overcrowded or an inmate's safety is at risk. However, a person must face trial in the same jurisdiction where they were arrested unless the judge or prosecutor agrees to move the case to another location. If you know someone is in custody in Lumpkin County but can't find them, it might be due to incorrect spelling of their name, outdated booking information, release from jail, or being held at another facility. If your search returns "no record found" despite knowing the person is in jail, it could mean one of these issues. When you're released from jail but your record still appears online, it's because some jails keep this info public indefinitely. You'll need to consult an attorney and request a court order to remove this information. If you were found guilty, it's unlikely they will erase the records. To notify an inmate about a family member's passing, call the Lumpkin County Detention Center immediately at 706-864-0412. The Lumpkin County Detention Center follows a sensitive protocol when an inmate's family member has passed away. A designated staff member will inform the inmate of the news through a clergy member, counselor, or a high-ranking jail official to prevent potential violent outbursts. The center understands that such news can be emotionally overwhelming and may pose a risk to staff safety. In rare instances, an inmate is allowed to attend a funeral outside the jail, but this comes with strict conditions. They must have at least two armed escorts and it poses significant costs, risks, and potential dangers to the public. The decision ultimately depends on the inmate's security classification, the jail's staffing capacity, official policy, and the presence of an attorney. Security classifications range from minimum to high, determined by factors such as the inmate's current crime, previous offenses, history of violence, gang affiliation, and the jail's current population distribution. Jail records publicly available for inmates include basic information like name, physical characteristics, booking numbers, charges, and court details. Vinelink.com is a national public roster that provides access to inmate status and tracking information. This database allows the public to look up an inmate's status and track their movements throughout the justice system. VINE Notification System The Victim Information and Notification Everyday (VINE) system is a helpful tool for those who have been victims of or witnesses to a crime, and fear that the release of an offender may pose a danger to them or someone close. This system allows anyone to register for automated notifications via email, text, or phone regarding the status of an offender. Locating Old Jail Records To find old Lumpkin County Detention Center inmate records from previous years, it's essential to contact the county sheriff directly. A written request should include: * Inmate name and any aliases * Date of birth * The date range in which the inmate was incarcerated * Crime charged or convicted of * Any additional helpful information Sealing Jail Records To have a jail record from an arrest in Lumpkin County sealed, the crime must be expunged. This process typically involves: 1. Hiring a lawyer specializing in expungement 2. Filing a petition with the court where the individual was charged or convicted 3. The entire process may take around 1-2 years Accessing State Prison Records To obtain records of prisoners who were incarcerated in state prisons within Georgia and have since been released, a written request should be sent to the state prison system. This includes: * Inmate name and any aliases * Date of birth * The date range in which the inmate was incarcerated * Crime charged or convicted of * Name of the facility where they were incarcerated Lumpkin County Detention Center Services The Lumpkin County Detention Center offers various services, including: * Inmate services and facility information * Phone contact: 706-864-0412 * Physical address: 385 E. Main Street Dahlonega, GA 30533 * Mailing addresses for personal mail, legal mail or subscriptions The charts provide detailed data on arrests and incarcerations in Lumpkin County and state prisons nationwide, including demographics and crime types. The information is compiled from local sources, including police reports and sheriff's department records, as well as national data from the Georgia Department of Justice, Census Bureau, and US Department of Justice.